

Don't sit in the classroom. Kitchen Academy offers a fresh approach to professional cooking. Hands-on cooking from day one. Earn your Professional Culinary Diploma in as few as 30 weeks.

www.kitchenacademy.com

Tell Me More!

KITCHEN ACADEMY™
HOLLYWOOD

Daniel Rubin

Reporter at the Philadelphia Inquirer since 1988, except from 2000 to 2003, when I was Knight Ridder's European correspondent, based in Berlin. Latest job: covering the business of entertainment. View my complete profile

Email

It was a wise man who said news is a conversation. Let's talk. Please comment on what moves you. If you email me, I might want to quote from it. Unless you tell me it's private. I honor confidences.

Local Interest

- [shallowcenter]
- A List Of Things Thrown Five Minutes Ago
- A Smoke-Filled Room
- Afro-Netizen™
- artblog
- Attytood
- Balls, Sticks and Stuff
- Blankbaby
- blonde sagacity
- Citizen Mom
- Daily Sally

« Back In Time | Main | The Rubins »

January 17, 2006

Happy Birthday, Blog Daddy

Happy birthday to Ben Franklin, the nation's first blogger.

Not so far a stretch, really. He pamphleteered, self-published, delivered colonial dish, news and opinion, sampled other's work and remixed it into his own mash.

He wrote anonymously, or under pseudonyms. Instead of posting daily, he squirreled away his words and published them in an almanac.

Doesn't this sound familiar?

In 1732 I first published my Almanack, under the name of Richard Saunders; it was continued by me about twenty-five years, commonly called "Poor Richard's Almanac." I

January 2006

Sun	Mon	Tue	Wed	Thu	Fri	Sat
1	2	3	4	5	6	7
8	9	10	11	12	13	14
15	16	17	18	19	20	21
22	23	24	25	26	27	28
29	30	31

Advertisements

Good Grief! Does this blog make my butt look big How Appealing
 iFlipFlop
 Philly
 Philly Future
 Sarcasm's Corner
 The All Spin Zone
 The700Level.com
 slacktivist
 Suburban Guerrilla
 The Rittenhouse Review
 Philebrity
 Philadelphia Weather
 Above Average Jane
 Beerleaguer
 Phillyist
 Philadelphia Will Do

Poli Sci

skippy the bush kangaroo pandagon
 lgf the terrible infant speaks
 The Daily Howler
 The American Times
 Oliver Willis
 Instapundit
 Informed Comment
 Eschaton
 Daily Kos

Foreign P.O.V.

signandsight
 Der Spiegel Online
 Guardian Unlimited Newsblog
 Global Voices Online
 Economist.com
 BerlinBites

Media Mania

Bayosphere
 Blogspotting - BusinessWeek Online
 CJR Daily Home
 First Draft by Tim Porter
 Hypergene MediaBlog
 Online Journalism Review

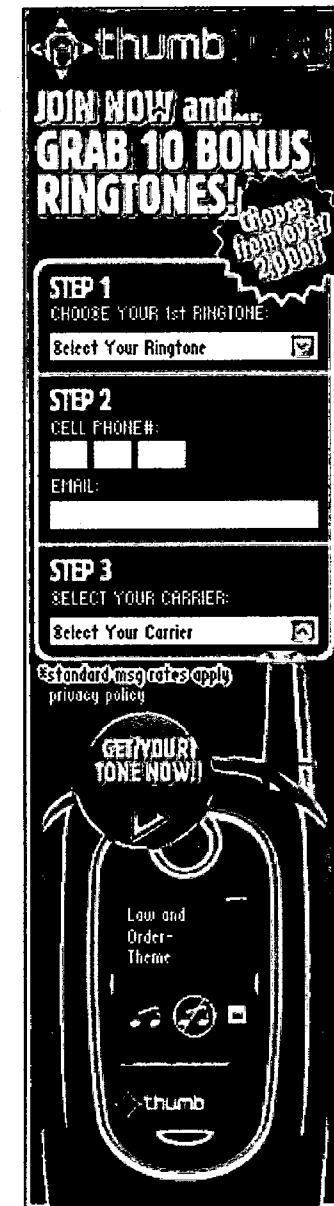

endeavored to make it both entertaining and useful, and it accordingly came to be in such demand that I reaped considerable profit from it, vending annually near ten thousand. And observing that it was generally read, scarce any neighborhood in the province being without it, I considered it as a proper vehicle for conveying instruction among the common people, who brought scarcely any other books. I therefore filled all the little spaces that occurred between the remarkable days in the calendar with proverbial sentences, chiefly such as inculcated industry and frugality as the means of procuring wealth and thereby securing virtue; it being more difficult for a man in want to act always honestly as, to use here one of those proverbs, it is hard for an empty sack to stand upright.

All except for the profitable part.

Ok, this is not an original idea. Josh Peterson, co-founder of the company that created the 43 Things site, has podcast about Ben, the blogger. He sees modern-day Franklins in Lawrence Lessig and Robert Scoble.

Peterson wrote Blinq by email:

Franklin was the consummate amateur - someone who pursues their interests out of a love for the thing, not as a recognized expert - and that sort of amateurism gave us the lending library, the volunteer fire department, swim fins, and most of Franklin's accomplishments in diplomacy and science. Today, the web provides the premiere opportunity to practice this sort of amateurism. What starts as a google search and ends in a blog post opens the doors to amateur journalism. A way to trade Pez dispensers with others passionate about collectables turns into eBay, a mailing list for friends can turn into Craigslist, and a democratic idea like using "who links to whom" as a way for ranking results in a search engine provides the idea that makes Google great.

Categories
 Americana

Poynter Online - Romenesko
 PressThink
 Reflections of a Newsosaur editorsweblog.org

One-stop

BuzzMachine... by Jeff Jarvis
 Daypop Top 40 Links
 DeepBlog
 Joho the Blog
 PubSub
 Technorati
 The Command Post - A Newsblog Collective
 The Huffington Post The Front Page

Arts, Culture, Cheap Thrills

stereogum songsillinois said the gramophone music (for robots)
 largehearted boy
 Wonkette
 WFMU's Beware of the Blog
 THE TOFU HUT
 Spoilt Victorian Child
 Jazz And Conversation
 Gawker
 Fluxblog
 Blogcritics.org
 ArtsJournal Blog Central
 Arts and Letters Daily

It's Technical

Slashdot News for nerds, stuff that matters
 Gizmodo
 Dynamist Blog
 Boing Boing: A Directory of Wonderful Things

Recent Posts

Dark And Treeless
 The Rubins
 Happy Birthday, Blog Daddy

Dave McNamee has blogged about blogger Ben:

The arguments that he crafted in his written works helped him accomplish great things throughout his life. I think blogging can do the same thing for a person if they put some thought into it.

Blog seer Doc Searls has said it. So has legal blogger, J. Craig Williams, who opined, and somewhat debatedly: all bloggers are journalists. All we have to do is rely on precedent. You know - go back in time at bit. Thanks, Ben Franklin, for the reminder that one person can be writer, printer and publisher all rolled into one.

Finally, read Rex Hammock: Someone, and I can promise it won't be me, should adapt the works of Franklin into a blog format. If ever there was a blogger ahead of his time, it was Benjamin Franklin. He even wrote under multiple pseudonyms so that he could debate himself (and, as some of the personas were female, herself).

Now there's a profitable idea.

Posted by Daniel Rubin at 12:00 AM in Weblogs
 Permalink

TrackBack

TrackBack URL for this entry:
<http://www.typepad.com/t/trackback/4054753>

Listed below are links to weblogs that reference Happy Birthday, Blog Daddy:

» Ben Franklin: The Nation's First Blogger from Philly Future
 Blinq observes the birthday of Ben Franklin, noting some similarities between Ben and modern day bloggers. Given

Art
 Arts & Crafts
 Blinq Favorites
 Breaking News
 City Life
 Education
 Faith
 Family Business
 Food and Drink Games
 Haberdashery
 Health
 Lit
 Media
 Modern Times
 Movies
 Music
 On Holiday
 Poetry
 Poli Sci
 Prison News
 Radio
 Science
 Sex
 Sports
 Stuff
 Traffic
 Travel
 TV
 Weather
 Weblogs
 Web/Tech

Back In Time
 For The Man Who Has Everything
 Donovan Fans
 Tune In, Turn On Broad Street Review
 Heavy Lifting
 A Stranger In The Dark

Archives

January 2006
 December 2005
 November 2005
 October 2005
 September 2005
 August 2005
 July 2005
 June 2005
 May 2005

blinq =

a contraction of blog and inquirer. Fast, but not ephemeral. And it's part of the newspaper, the filtered, mainstream aggregator that pays me:

The Point

I cover the blogosphere, trawling the millions of sites of vaunted wisdom and unvarnished pablum so you don't have to.

A Disclaimer

This site contains links to other Web sites. We have no control over the content or privacy practices of those sites.

Syndicate this site

Add me to your TypePad People list

Powered by TypePad

More

Philly's rich offerings to the blogosphere, I guess it makes sense. [\[Read More\]](#)

Tracked on Jan 17, 2006 2:01:07 AM

Comments

It doesn't matter who you are or what you do - if you live in this city, Ben Franklin had an impact on you.

Posted by: Wade Bligsog | Jan 17, 2006 1:41:37 AM

Post a comment

Name:

Remember personal info?

Email Address:

URL:

Comments:

Preview

Post